

Stepping into a womb a mother locked down follows the urge to climb inside the giant womb she made to honour her own womb for the toil and strife for the long wait and the silent grief for giving life to her everything child for grieving all over again