

These small objects, that fit in the palm, were made by the artist during art therapy sessions. Object relations theory is a psychoanalytic theory that suggests humans are motivated by the need to form relationships. Internal objects can represent significant others like mother, but also parts like the mothers breast.