

Two favorite brushes, found shortly after the return to the studio postpartum. Last used the day my waters broke, they sat forgotten for a few months in a jug of slowly evaporating water while I tended to new life with little sleep until they solidified in the paint residue; a fossil of my former life, of who I was before.